[prose] a filter screen is a measure of time

a filter screen is a measure of time an illness is a measure of time irritability is a measure of time eco-consciousness is a measure of time new Apple devices are a measure of time dreams, a measure of multiple times

asleep or awake

are we still in time?

time times

worn fabrics on the brim of my soccer cleat's sole, the cuff of the blue&grey hoodie, the backs of all the thirts that more than once rubbed with the American Traveler backpack, on the bottom corner of which is found a hole

the books on the shelf lying on top of the standing ones, filling up then piling up on the desk beside, a small proportion of whose pages have been flipped through for a prolonged idleness

unspent summer

unworn ropes

unrealized potential

uncounted times

life that goes without the love of life

I could not afford—

my affordance is a measure of time
