[quip] i know sth’s gold when it glitters, not when i know it’s gold…

[quip] i know sth’s gold when it glitters, not when i know it’s gold.

Axiom: Not all that glitters is gold.

Question: Do you want gold, or do you want that which glitters?

Thinking:

- The factor of time. That which glitters may dim soon but gold stays.
- Being awestruck is more than a feeling. It’s deep. The glitter has not to be superficial.
- what is the use of gold, if not for its glitters? gold is not naturally currency; currency is naturally gold. but here we don’t care about gold as currency.

My Verdict: I want a fabulous life. It can be cheap but it transcends. That which glitters for someone with a deep eye and soul.